This week I'm reviewing that... that ...Oh, Anahita, I just don't know how to tell you this but I couldn't make it out to the local Hollywood Video this week. I was not able to rent this week's film because APPARENTLY video rental stores uh... aren't doing so well. I woke up yesterday IN A FRENZY to find my local Hollywood Video has...transformed - like a reverse Cinderella fantasy - into a TCBY - which I assume stands for Taking Care of Business Yogurt! - 'cuz I had two pumps of the yogurt machine and let me tell you: not bad! 20 stars and a spoonful of jimmmies!

Chim chimminy CHIMES! Because it's now time for Ana-reada's poetry nook. Anahita?

An Ode to the Lark outside my Window by Charleston Drew

Oh Wipperwill!
 Wipperwon'tyou?
 The trilling chirping outside my window pane.
 Has a soul ever known another?
 Through thin shades of pane.
 You - oh you - I envy your hollow bones
 The way the wind lifts you into God's embrace
 You are truly the sphere of shimmering pop in the Creator's drinking straw

In the evening mists you stand
 One legged in the marsh
 Spearing the frogs in your sabre-like bone mouth
 But they shall not know the sweet release.. of thine digestion.

WIPPERWILL!
 WIPPERWON'TYOU?
 Take me with you?

For though mine own bones be hollow.
 I cannot fly
 For the polio
 Took my walking.
